Dairy Management.

The selection of breeding of the very best milk cows and the proper management of them and of everything connected with the dairy, are matters of such importance that too much attention cannot be given to them. There is no use in attempting to keep milk cows with profit on inferior pastures, where weeds and coarse grasses occupy the soil. The land must be in good heart, the grasses of the best quality and the water as pure as possible. It has been frequently remarked that even on the best pastures, cows which are compelled to drink muddy, stagnant water never produce a good quality of butter.

The large quantity of inferior butter which is always found glutting the markets is a pretty fair indication that there is a screw loose in the management of the dairy. It is probable that in some dairies all the screws are loose—the cows are not suited for the purpose for which they are kept; they have not sufficient pasture nor good water; they are worried by being driven from the pasture at a rapid rate; they are annoyed by reckless, irritable, noisy milkers. The milk-house is too small, or too hot; has not sufficient ventilation, and is not kept sufficiently clean. The cream is not taken off when the milk is "ripe," and it is left to stand too long before churning. The churning process is performed too quick or too slow; the buttermilk is not worked out of the butter, although the latter may have been made soapy by injudicious handling. To finish all, an inferior quality of salt is used, and the butter packed in unsuitable vessels.—Western Rural.

SUMMER MANURE.—If cows are yarded or stalled, a very large quantity of manure is saved. We are too apt to look upon the manure crop as the harvest of the winter. With reasonable forethought and diligence the manure heaps will grow quite as fast in summer. We have one great advantage—fermentation takes place much more rapidly; hence, accumulations of vegetable matter, fresh, or in form of muck and peat, if composted with stable manure, ashes, or lime, very rapidly ferment, and ripen into homogeneity, ready for use in the autumn.

Swine are widely employed as the summer manure makers, and they are worth so much more as rooters than "tamed," that it is not worth while to "ring" or "tame" them, until they are penned to fatten. Confine them where they may have conveniently, sods, weeds and all sorts of green rubbish thrown to them to work over. If upon the manure of other stock, encourage diligence by scattering occasionally handfuls of corn about the heap. If muck or sods are used in the compost, swine will often tread it so hard as to arrest fermentation.—Id.

The Gardner's Monthly recommends the following mode for enriching the soil for young cabbage plants just before they are set out, for the purpose of giving them an early and vigorous start: Make holes with a dibble where the plants are to be set, and then fill these holes with manure water. It soaks away into the surrounding earth, and becomes perfectly diffused through it. The plants are then set in the holes.

Mr. J. Harris says in the American Agriculturist, that "clover is unquestionably the great renovating crop of American agriculture. A crop of clover, equal to two tons of hay, which ploughed under will furnish more ammonia to the soil than twenty loads of straw made manure, drawn out fresh and wet in the spring, or than twelve tons of our ordinary barn-yard manure." He, however, thinks it nearly as well to make the clover into hay, feed it out, and carefully save the manure,—that is, there will be little loss in the value of the fertilizer, and may be profit from the feeding.

PROTECTING CUCUMBERS, &c.—Take a willow or other twigs and bending it in the form of a bow thrust both ends into the ground on opposite sides of the hill; then place another in the same manner across the first and spread over a newspaper and fasten in down by placing earth or small stones all around.

TRELLIS FOR TOMATOES.—The best trellis for the tomato plant is a barrel hoop secured to three stakes a foot high. They may fastened by nails or strings.

The superiority of Herkimer Co. pastures is attributed to the prevalence of clover. This has more nitrogen than the grasses, and hence better for the dairy.

Weeds will need constant attention; they are easily managed when young, and are very stubborn when large. The free use of the rake or the pronged hoe will keep the garden in order, with much less trouble than periodical spells of hoeing.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, the St. Albans Bank, a corporation, duly incorporated by the Legislature of the State of Vermont, located and doing business at St. Albans, in the county of Franklin, has made application to me, requesting me to issue a proclamation designating some day for the termination of the existence of said corporation;

And whereas, it has been made to appear to me that two-thirds of the legal votes of the stockholders of said corporation were given in favor of said application;

Now, therefore, I, Paul Dillingham, Governor of the State of Vermont, in conformity with said application, and the provisions of section eighty-six and eighty-seven of chapter eighty-nine of the General Statutes of Vermont, do hereby issue my proclamation, and declare that on the twenty-fifth day of March, A. D. 1868, the said corporation shall cease to exist as fully and with the same effect as if said charter expired by the limitation thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereto signed my name and caused the seal of the State of Vermont to be hereunto affixed, in Executive Chambers at Waterbury, this 23rd day of September, A. D. 1867, and of the Independence of the United States the 15th.
